Excerpt: . . . and took a census of the white population, which was ascertained to be 6, 000. The enumeration was confined to the whites, because 1854 Census the black and colored population was cared for in the main by their owners. Being immunes also, very few, not exceeding fifteen, perished from the fever. In a medico-statistical sense, this census was of great value in establishing the true rate of mortality. Savannah, September 28, 1854. Wm. Hone, Esq. , President Young Mens Benevolent Association: Dear Sir--The community is already so much indebted to your Association for acts of benevolence, that place it under obligations, which can never be repaid, except by the most heartfelt acknowledgement of the benefit it has conferred, that it may, perhaps, be tasking the kindness of its members too much to ask a favor, which is rather foreign to the objects of their organization....
