D, Vol. 2: Principal Librarian of the University of Cambridge, Containing All His Writings, Except the Life of Cicero Several of these pieces, which compose this Volume, were written, by me many years ago; chiefly for my own-information, on the occasion of certain controversies, then warmly agitated, concerning the grounds and reasons of the Christian religion and especially on the prophecies of the Old Testament, which are cited in the New, and applied to the particular acts and circumstances of our Saviour s life. For when the enemies of revelation attempted to discredit those citations, as being neither fairly made, nor rightly applied; and our Divines, on the other hand, had nothing to offer in the defence of them, in which a man of sense could reasonably acquiesce; I was willing to try, whether, from my own examination the case, I might not be able to draw out something more satisfactory and if no solution of the difficulty could be found in the citations themselves, whether it might not be drawn from the characters of the Evangelists, who made and applied them - for this topic, I knew, tho intimately connected with the question, was, what none of our common Advocates would venture to touch upon: whose fortunes in the Church depend, not on seeking out what is true, but on defending what is established; and on inventing expedients to puzzle, where they cannot confute an Adversary.
