Part ii. suggestions for hospital architecture, with plans for A small hospital. by william atkinson, Architect. hospital architecture. It is the province of hospital architecture to provide for the collective treatment of sick and wounded persons, and to promote, as far as planning and construction of buildings can do so, their comfort and restoration to health. The excellence of a hospital does not consist in the proportions of its facade, or the profiles of its mouldings; it is to be sought for in the records of mortality and cure within its walls. From the preliminary studies to the last details of construction, the sanitary aspect of the problem should be uppermost in the mind of the designer. The following suggestions, while applicable to hospitals of any description, are more especially intended for those built on the pavilion plan, of detached buildings of a...
